OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 30.—(P)—Enthusiasts for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower appear to have cracked wide open the almost solid wall of Oklahoma Republican support for Senator Robert A. Taft's bid for the GOP presidential nomination.

Starting almost from scratch with Eisenhower's announcement several weeks ago that he is a Republican and available for the nomination, the general's hastily organized backers have the Taft forces fighting a desperate battle in an area they believed safely within their hands.

Ohioan Enters New Hampshire Primary

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—Senator Robert A. Taft has decided to challenge Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for the Republican presidential nomination in the New Hampshire primary March 11.

"Win, lose or draw, I feel I should permit the preference vote to be taken in New Hampshire," the Ohio senator said.

Harold E. Stassen, another aspirant for the Republican nomination, also has been entered in the New Hampshire preferential primary but Taft made no mention of him in formally challenging Eisenhower.

Taft said "the political machine of the present state administration is openly pledged to Gen. Eisenhower" in New Hampshire.

This was a reference to Gov. Sherman Adams, Senator Tobey and other New Hampshire Republicans.

"DESPITE those factors which are apparently unfavorable," Taft said he would not exercise his right to withdraw in New Hampshire.

"So long as loyal friends of mine insist on undertaking a campaign for delegates favorable to me, I do not like to urge their withdrawal, or handicap them by failing to have my name appear as a candidate on the same ballot as theirs," Taft said.

Fourteen delegates to the Republican nominating convention are at stake in New Hampshire.

New Egyptian Premier Talks To West Aides

CAIRO, Jan. 30.—(P)—Egypt's new strongman premier, Ali Maher Pasha, met Wednesday with ambassadors of the four powers which proposed last October that Egypt join the West in a new Middle East defense command to defend the Suez Canal.

Though the Western embassies said the envoys' calls were only the courtesy visits usually made on a new government head, they came only a few hours after Maher Pasha told the London News Chronicle in an interview "I am ready to discuss a Middle East command with the four powers."

In Moscow, Izvestia, organ of the Soviet government, asserted the United States had forced King Farouk to change Egypt's government, replacing Premier Mustapha Nahas Pasha by Maher Pasha.

The Soviet paper said U. S. Ambassador Jefferson Caffery, in an interview with Farouk the day before Nahas Pasha was dismissed, ordered Farouk to appoint Maher Pasha as premier in his place.

Ohio Floods Lose Punch

Gallipolis Braced; Marietta Relaxing

PORTSMOUTH, Jan. 30.—(P)—The Ohio River flood crest—a winter-time sneak that drove upwards to 10,000 from their homes—swept to the doorstep of Gallipolis Wednesday, but, its Sunday punch was about gone.

Bitter cold, the killer of floods, cut the crest to somewhat less damaging depths.

The river rose slowly—if at all—at Roller Dam, 10 miles upstream from Gallipolis, and in Gallipolis itself where the reading was 53.7 feet. Flood stage is 50 feet.

The U. S. Weather Bureau in Cincinnati indicated previous crest estimates probably would stand, or would be cut slightly. This would bring the Portsmouth crest to 58 feet, and the Cincinnati crest to 59 feet. In neither case would damage be excessive.

Only a few warehouses would be inundated at Cincinnati and about 250 rural families—unprotected by Portsmouth's 77-foot flood wall—would be made refugees.

THE WINTER cold, which pinned down into ice many tons of tributary flood waters and helped save the flood situation, caused other discomforts, however. It made the business of cleaning up after the flood crest passed a brutal task.

Instead of the customary digging out of mud and hosing down of floors, returning refugees would find themselves with the job of chopping away ice.

The river crested Tuesday in Marietta where about one-third of the business district and scattered residential areas were inundated.

A few miles downstream from Marietta at Parkersburg, W. Va., the river crested at 44.36 feet, more than eight feet above flood stage, Tuesday afternoon.

At both Marietta and Parkersburg the water began falling and work toward normal living began.

Million Dollar Fire Hits 3 Cincy Buildings

CINCINNATI, Jan. 30.—(P)—The worst fire to hit Cincinnati in 15 years has left three brick buildings of the Cincinnati Sash and Door Co. in smoking ruins.

Fire officials said only the blazes during the great 1937 flood could compare to the fire that swept the west end block Tuesday night and caused $1 million in damage.

Twenty-five firemen suffered minor injuries while battling the fire in 17-degree temperature. Fire Chief Barney Houston was one of the injured when a wall collapsed. Others were treated for frostbite.

Thick layers of ice coated fire equipment, the streets and firemen.

Scores of families fled nearby tenement houses—some carting their furniture.

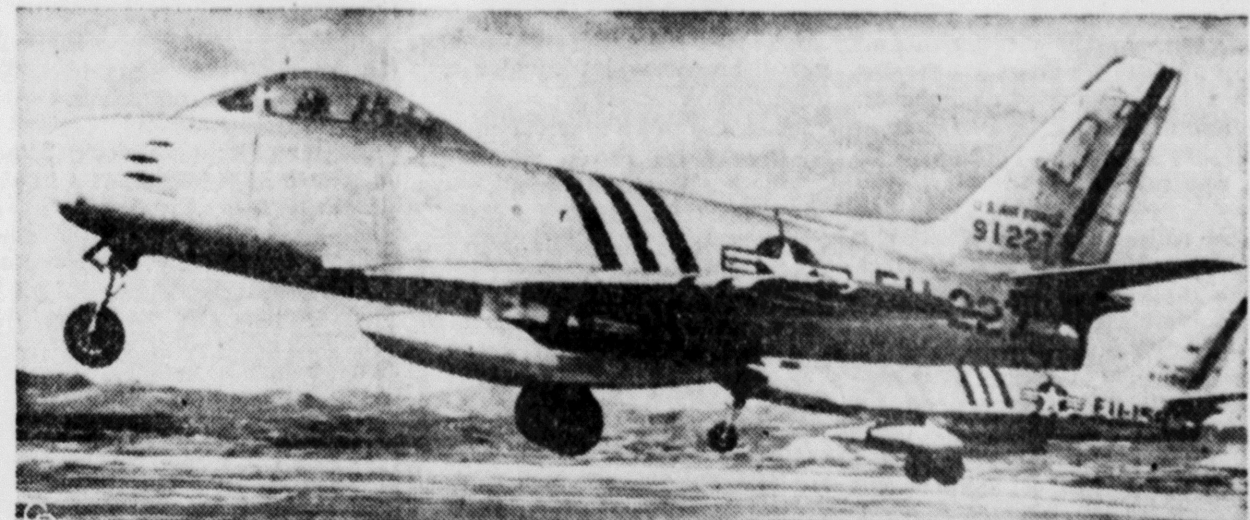

Lowell E. Peters, secretary-treasurer of the concern, said the replacement value of the building was $500,000, and it contained stock valued at another half-million.

PUCO Approves Hike For Ohio Consolidated

COLUMBUS, Jan. 30.—(P)—The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio Wednesday granted the Ohio Consolidated Telephone Co., operator of 39 Ohio exchanges, an emergency rate increase that will give the company an additional $221,871 annually.

It was the first time the commission ever had granted an emergency hike to a telephone company.

The company last July asked an increase of $739,725. Two months later it sought an emergency increase of $551,791, claiming it was needed to pay bond interests and preferred stock dividends.

The commission said if the emergency increase had not been granted the company's credit standing would be impaired. The company listed $121,800 in bond interest obligations, $60,000 in preferred dividends it must meet, and higher labor costs and taxes in its plea for an increase.

The commission held a half-dozen hearings in November before deciding to grant the 11.43 per cent increase to all exchanges. The company had asked a 28.43 per cent increase.

THE COMMISSION still has before it the company's request for the $739,725 increase.

The company is the second largest independent telephone company in Ohio. It has exchanges in these communities:

Clarksville, Dillonvale, Holloway, Maria Stein, Mt. Pleasant, New Athens, Port William, a. m. Adena, Flushing, Laurelville, Martinsville, Millersport, New Vienna, Pleasantville, Scioto, Smithfield, Williamsville, Ashville, Blanchester, Brilliant, Evesville, Convey, Leesburg, New Bremen, New Concord, Cadiz, Greenfield, Circleville, St. Marys, Wilmington, Cambridge, Lucasville, New Boston, Portsmouth and Sciotoville.

Attorney Shows Girdle Capacity

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(P)—Can a Persian lamb coat be hidden inside a girdle?

It is physically impossible, the defense claimed at the trial of two women accused of shop lifting.

But assistant District Attorney James P. McGrath picked up a girdle entered in evidence. He wiggled his 180-pound frame into it and then stuffed the coat in question inside.

The jury found Margaret Walker, 30, and Mrs. Leary Wright, 47, both guilty.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—(P)—Movie exhibitors are planning a half-billion dollar coast to coast television network all their own.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30.—(P)—Federal Judge E. Goodman says it's not dignified to threaten a witness thus:

Diplomats See Rift Between China, Russia

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—The State Department is studying reports that Red China and Soviet Russia are drifting apart.

The department's official bulletin in a review of happenings behind the Iron Curtain during 1951 defined off with this comment on China:

"In China, one of the country's where food production has fallen in spite of so-called 'land reform', mass executions, and the liquidation of landlords, year end reports describe a growing coolness between Peiping and Moscow."

The department did not enlarge on the point but said that in general "1951 proved to be an unhappy year behind the Iron Curtain."

"Month after month, and in country after country, the story has been the same," the summary said. "It is one of increasing dissatisfaction, unsuccessful repression, new purges, mass deportations, and other forms of Communist frightfulness in the now familiar Soviet pattern."

"In the free world, by contrast, 1951 has been a year of rising strength, rising hope, and rising production, combining to build new bulwarks against Soviet aggression and promote the cause of peace."

"Troubles also mounted in the Soviet Union itself. These reports, together with a rising tide of escapes and escape attempts as thousands of refugees left or tried to leave Russian territory, contributed additional detail to the story of Soviet troubles and human courage in resisting oppression."

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—(P)—Jack O'Leary, who weighed 135 pounds before he was seized with the world's longest hiccuping attack more than three and a half years ago, is now down to 78.

Taft, Lewis Hook Up In Name-Calling

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—Senator Taft (R-Ohio) and John L. Lewis hooked up in a bitter name-calling clash at a Senate committee hearing on coal mine safety Wednesday.

Lewis termed the Taft-Hartley law "a slave act" and wound up with this broadside at the GOP presidential hopeful:

"If you are ever elected President, Mr. Taft, and Joe Stalin should ask you about the Taft-Hartley slave act, I don't know how you'll answer him."

"I can handle Stalin all right," Taft retorted, "and I managed to handle the workers of Ohio."

He was obviously referring to his overwhelming reelection as senator in 1950 when his authorship of the labor law was a primary issue.

Earlier, Taft accused Lewis of injecting a "red herring" into Senate hearings and said it is "entirely untrue" that miners are denied the right to walk out of unsafe mines because of the labor law Taft authored.

AT ONE STAGE Taft asserted a mine owner has no more chance than "a snowball in hell" to bring a suit for breach of contract against the UMW.

When Lewis got out of his chair at the end of Taft's statement, he stood meekly, hands at his side, and asked in a low tone: "May I make an inquiry, please?"

Taft said: "I suggest Mr. Lewis come back to testify another time."

"Doesn't the senator want to hear what I've got to say?" Lewis asked.

When Taft had finished his strong criticism of Lewis' testimony, the United Mine Workers chief was refused a request to answer him.

Testifying Tuesday, Lewis said the "abominable, barbaric" Taft-Hartley law makes it possible for mine owners to file suit for breach of contract damages when miners refuse to work because alleged unsafe conditions.

Lewis said 114,025 coal miners (Continued on Page Two)

25,000 Troop Rotation Is Suggested

Chinese Communists Decide They Will Aid Administration

MUNSAN, Jan. 30.—(P)—Communist negotiators in a double reversal Wednesday agreed to the Allies rotating 25,000 troops a month during an armistice and said Chinese would join in administering the demilitarized zone.

The Reds balked, however, at restraints on moving their troops secretly into threatening concentrations during an armistice.

Previously the Communists had agreed to rotating only 5,000 UN troops. The Allies are asking for 75,000 a month.

Tuesday the Reds indicated the Chinese would take no part in civil administration of the northern half of a buffer zone during an armistice. Then they reversed it.

All these actions were taken by staff officers working their way slowly through an 18-page Allied draft of a plan for supervising an armistice.

THE REDS objected to two security proposals:

1. That both sides refrain from concentrating troops and guns in a manner to threaten the other side.

2. Both sides report weekly the exact location of all major ground, naval and air units.

In a neighboring tent at Panmunjom, a UN spokesman said, a North Korean general showed a critical and sarcastic interest in the Allied plan for exchanging prisoners.

Brig. Gen. William P. Nuekols said the Communist negotiator was "reasonably objective, but it would be incorrect to say any measurable progress was being made."

A UN Command communique said the staff officers "continued to make progress" on truce supervision.

The Red agreement to rotating 25,000 Allied troops, while far short of Allied requests, represented a major change in the Communist position. Originally they opposed any rotation at all.

The new Communist proposal would include troops sent to Japan for "rest and recreation" in addition to those sent home to be replaced.

Allied staff officers said, under these circumstances, 75,000 would be a minimum figure, but if it were limited to replacements 40,000 would be enough. Current Allied rotation figures are believed to run about 25,000 a month, and rest and relaxation leaves about the same.

Jail Sentences Given Men In Contracts Deal

DAYTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—A Cincinnati businessman and a former Air Force buyer were sentenced to prison Tuesday for conspiring to defraud the government and giving or accepting gratuities in Air Force contract deals.

U. S. District Judge Robert R. Nevin sentenced Lawrence A. Razete, an executive of Cincinnati Raytonics Co., to concurrent terms of three years on each of four counts of giving gratuities to an Air Force buyer, and another concurrent term of three years for conspiracy. Razete also was fined $2,000.

Luther M. Kratz, former buyer at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, was sentenced to concurrent terms of 18 months on each of five counts. Kratz, who had admitted accepting $900 and a radio from Razete, was a government witness at Razete's trial.

U. S. attorneys said Razete's firm got Air Force contracts totaling nearly $6 million.

Both men got stays of execution until Feb. 14 and Razete until Feb. 5. Both are free on bond. Razete's attorneys said they will appeal to the sixth circuit court of appeals in Cincinnati.

AEC Report Details Progress Made By Atomic Program

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—The nation's vast plant for the projected hydrogen bomb will cost more than twice as much as originally estimated, the Atomic Energy Commission reported Wednesday.

Chairman Gordon Dean of the AEC declared the probable cost has been "upped considerably" from a $600 million "estimate" of a year and a half ago to $1.25 billion at present.

Dean said the estimates were revised because it is apparent now that "reactors" will cost more than had been expected.

Reactors are devices for making atomic explosives.

The AEC had announced that the reactors at the South Carolina H-bomb plant were to be of "advanced" design. Dean said "the design is still not completed on some of them."

THE NEW estimate was contained in the AEC's semi-annual report to Congress. The commission described "intense activity" in the last six months throughout the entire atomic enterprise—including an "expanding atomic weapons program." It told of:

1. Full blast operation of all its existing plants including those for making atomic explosives.

2. Progress on new construction entailing three percent of the nation's total building expenditures and employing nearly two per cent of the country's total construction force.

3. "Continued" increase in the output of fissionable materials—uranium and plutonium.

4. "Substantial" and "significant advances" in weapons research and development.

5. Increased domestic production of uranium ores.

6. Research findings with radioactive isotopes that may lead to improved methods of farming "and lowered costs of food and fibre production."

7. Further agricultural research (Continued on Page Two)

Court Thaws Beer, Wine Permit Freeze

COLUMBUS, Jan. 30.—(P)—The Ohio Supreme Court Wednesday cleared the way for the issuance of hundreds of new beer and wine permits.

Liquor Director William C. Bryant said the action permits his department to go ahead with plans to grant beer and wine permits to all qualified applicants. But he said the department will not issue new liquor licenses.

The court said the right of the Board of Liquor Control to set license quotas at the level outstanding in various areas on April 11, 1949, was established in common pleas court.

The supreme court had affirmed a decision made last Dec. 19 that the department must accept and process applications.

The high court also reversed lower court decisions that had knocked out the department's refusal to grant new liquor licenses in areas where they had dropped below the number outstanding on the "freeze" date.

The court also said the department has the sole right to determine whether an existing permit can be transferred from one place to another, or from one person to another. It said such action is not dependent alone on the willingness or desire of the permit holder to make a transfer.

Chinese Communists Decide They Will Aid Administration

MUNSAN, Jan. 30.—(P)—Communist negotiators in a double reversal Wednesday agreed to the Allies rotating 25,000 troops a month during an armistice and said Chinese would join in administering the demilitarized zone.

The Reds balked, however, at restraints on moving their troops secretly into threatening concentrations during an armistice.

Previously the Communists had agreed to rotating only 5,000 UN troops. The Allies are asking for 75,000 a month.

Tuesday the Reds indicated the Chinese would take no part in civil administration of the northern half of a buffer zone during an armistice. Then they reversed it.

All these actions were taken by staff officers working their way slowly through an 18-page Allied draft of a plan for supervising an armistice.

THE REDS objected to two security proposals:

1. That both sides refrain from concentrating troops and guns in a manner to threaten the other side.

2. Both sides report weekly the exact location of all major ground, naval and air units.

In a neighboring tent at Panmunjom, a UN spokesman said, a North Korean general showed a critical and sarcastic interest in the Allied plan for exchanging prisoners.

Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckols said the Communist negotiator was "reasonably objective, but it would be incorrect to say any measurable progress was being made."

A UN Command communiqué said the staff officers "continued to make progress" on truce supervision.

The Red agreement to rotating 25,000 Allied troops, while far short of Allied requests, represented a major change in the Communist position. Originally they opposed any rotation at all.

The new Communist proposal would include troops sent to Japan for "rest and recreation" in addition to those sent home to be replaced.

Allied staff officers said, under these circumstances, 75,000 would be a minimum figure, but if it were limited to replacements 40,000 would be enough. Current Allied rotation figures are believed to run about 25,000 a month, and rest and relaxation leaves about the same.

Jail Sentences Given Men In Contracts Deal

DAYTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—A Cincinnati businessman and a former Air Force buyer were sentenced to prison Tuesday for conspiring to defraud the government and giving or accepting gratuities in Air Force contract deals.

U. S. District Judge Robert R. Nevin sentenced Lawrence A. Razete, an executive of Cincinnati Raytonics Co., to concurrent terms of three years on each of four counts of giving gratuities to an Air Force buyer, and another concurrent term of three years for conspiracy. Razete also was fined $2,000.

Luther M. Kratz, former buyer at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, was sentenced to concurrent terms of 18 months on each of five counts. Kratz, who had admitted accepting $900 and a radio from Razete, was a government witness at Razete's trial.

U. S. attorneys said Razete's firm got Air Force contracts totaling nearly $6 million.

Both men got stiffs of execution—Kratz until Feb. 14 and Razete until Feb. 5. Both are free on bond. Razete's attorneys said they will appeal to the sixth circuit court of appeals in Cincinnati.

AEC Report Details Progress Made By Atomic Program

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—The nation's vast plant for the projected hydrogen bomb will cost more than twice as much as originally estimated, the Atomic Energy Commission reported Wednesday.

Chairman Gordon Dean of the AEC declared the probable cost has been "upped considerably" from a $600 million "guesstimate" of a year and a half ago to $1.25 billion at present.

Dean said the estimates were revised because it is apparent now that "reactors" will cost more than had been expected.

Reactors are devices for making atomic explosives.

The AEC had announced that the reactors at the South Carolina H-bomb plant were to be of "advanced" design. Dean said "the design is still not completed on some of them."

THE NEW estimate was contained in the AEC's semi-annual report to Congress. The commission described "intense activity" in the last six months throughout the entire atomic enterprise—including an "expanding atomic weapons program." It told of:

1. Full blast operation of all its existing plants including those for making atomic explosives.

2. Progress on new construction entailing three percent of the nation's total building expenditures and employing nearly two per cent of the country's total construction force.

3. "Continued" increase in the output of fissionable materials—uranium and plutonium.

4. "Substantial" and "significant advances" in weapons research and development.

5. Increased domestic production of uranium ores.

6. Research findings with radioactive isotopes that may lead to improved methods of farming "and lowered costs of food and fibre production."

7. Further agricultural research (Continued on Page Two)

Court Thaws Beer, Wine Permit Freeze

COLUMBUS, Jan. 30.—(P)—The Ohio Supreme Court Wednesday cleared the way for the issuance of hundreds of new beer and wine permits.

Liquor Director William C. Bryant said the action permits his department to go ahead with plans to grant beer and wine permits to all qualified applicants. But he said the department will not issue new liquor licenses.

The court said the right of the Board of Liquor Control to set license quotas at the level outstanding in various areas on April 11, 1949, was established in common pleas court.

The supreme court had affirmed a decision made last Dec. 19 that the department must accept and process applications.

The high court also reversed lower court decisions that had knocked out the department's refusal to grant new liquor licenses in areas where they had dropped below the number outstanding on the "freeze" date.

The court also said the department has the sole right to determine whether an existing permit can be transferred from one place to another, or from one person to another. It said such action is not dependent alone on the willingness or desire of the permit holder to make a transfer.

Jackson School Closes Doors As Illness Increases

An increasing surge of illness has caused Jackson Township school to close down and several other Pickaway County schools to show alarm.

Superintendent Robert Moyer of Jackson Township school Wednesday announced the Jackson school will be closed Thursday and Friday because of illness.

Moyer pointed out that the move was made following increased absences in the high school and many other children requesting to go home because they did not feel well.

Concern also was being shown in Circleville high school and in Atlanta, Scioto and Darby Township schools.

Principal J. Wray Henry of Circleville high school Wednesday reported a total of 98 absences among the high school grades, roughly 20 percent of the enrollment.

"IT HAS BEEN about the same for the last few days," Henry said. "We'll just have to wait and see what develops."

Darby Township school reported 51 absences Wednesday. Atlanta had 30 and Scioto Township also reported an unusual number of absent pupils.

County Superintendent George D. McDowell said many of the schools were expressing concern over the situation but that only Jackson and Harrison Township schools have reached the point of closing to date.

Meanwhile, Harrison schools—Ashville, South Bloomfield and Duval—will attempt to reopen for normal operations Thursday morning.

THE THREE SCHOOLS were closed last Wednesday in the face of increasing absences due to illness.

"The illness seems to be leaving our young people now," said Superintendent John Hardin Wednesday, "but it is attacking the older persons."

Hardin reported that both Ashville school janitors are ill and that several teachers have been stricken.

Schools in neighboring counties also are being affected by the spreading wave of illness. Amanda school, Fairfield County, has closed because of illness, while Frankfort school, Ross County, also has been hard hit.

Jackson School Closes Doors As Illness Increases

An increasing surge of illness has caused Jackson Township school to close down and several other Pickaway County schools to show alarm.

Superintendent Robert Moyer of Jackson Township school Wednesday announced the Jackson school will be closed Thursday and Friday because of illness.

Moyer pointed out that the move was made following increased absences in the high school and many other children requesting to go home because they did not feel well.

Concern also was being shown in Circleville high school and in Atlanta, Scioto and Darby Township schools.

Principal J. Wray Henry of Circleville high school Wednesday reported a total of 98 absences among the high school grades, roughly 20 percent of the enrollment.

"IT HAS BEEN about the same for the last few days," Henry said. "We'll just have to wait and see what develops."

Darby Township school reported 51 absences Wednesday. Atlanta had 30 and Scioto Township also reported an unusual number of absent pupils.

County Superintendent George D. McDowell said many of the schools were expressing concern over the situation but that only Jackson and Harrison Township schools have reached the point of closing to date.

Meanwhile, Harrison schools—Ashville, South Bloomfield and Duval—will attempt to reopen for normal operations Thursday morning.

"The illness seems to be leaving our young people now," said Superintendent John Hardin Wednesday, "but it is attacking the older persons."

Hardin reported that both Ashville school janitors are ill and that several teachers have been stricken.

Schools in neighboring counties also are being affected by the spreading wave of illness. Amanda school, Fairfield County, has closed because of illness, while Frankfort school, Ross County, also has been hard hit.

Editor's Note: This is the third in a series explaining how to make out your income tax return for 1951.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—For each exemption you can legally claim you knock $600 off your income before the rest is taxable.

There are various exemptions and rules covering them: Husbands, wives, dependents, blind people, people 65 or over, and people who were born or died in 1951.

Everyone with $600 or more income last year must file a return, and everyone who does so gets a $600 exemption for himself.

A wife is not considered a dependent. If she had no income, and you file a return but she doesn't, you claim an exemption for her.

If she had any income, no matter how small, you get no exemption for her unless she files jointly with you.

Where a husband and wife each had income but file separate returns, each claims his own exemption.

Can a wife claimed as a dependent by someone like her father—it must be a close relative—who supported her? Yes.

But then her husband can't claim any exemption for her because, when she's claimed as the dependent of another, she can neither file jointly with her husband nor claim any exemption for herself.

IF A WIFE does file jointly with her husband, she can't be claimed as a dependent by anyone else even though the latter supported her. In short, a wife can't be claimed as an exemption on two returns.

Couples divorced or legally separated any time in 1951—even as late as Dec. 31—must file separate returns for the year. Each then gets only his own exemption.

Even though a husband paid all the support of a divorced or legally separated wife he can't claim an exemption for her.

Husbands and wives living apart by Dec. 31, 1951, but not divorced or legally separated during that year, may file a joint return.

A man and wife are considered married for all of 1951 if they were married as late as Dec. 31, 1951.

Although no one has to file a return unless he had $600 or more income, a quirk in the old law said you couldn't claim as a dependent anyone who had $500 or more income. That's been changed.

Now you can claim as a dependent—no matter how young or old—anyone who had less than $600 income in 1951, who received more than half his support from you, and who is closely related by blood, marriage or adoption as follows:

YOUR CHILD or grandchild; a stepchild but not his children; a legally adopted child; a brother, sister, step-brother, step-sister; your parents, grandparents, or other ancestors; your step-father, step-mother; aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews; your father-in-law, mother-in-law, brother-in-law, sister-in-law, son-in-law, or daughter-in-law.

As an illustration of what close relation by blood means, you can't claim a cousin as a dependent.

Some government payments to veterans are tax-free. You can claim as a dependent a veteran who, although receiving tax-free government money, had less than $600 taxable income of his own and fitted the other requirements listed above for a dependent.

You can claim as a dependent for all of 1951 anyone born as late as Dec. 31, 1951 who truly fits the rules covering dependents, even though the child died a moment after birth. You can't claim as a dependent an unborn child or one born dead.

Can husband and wife, when filing separate returns, divide the exemptions for dependents between them? No. Only the person who has provided more than half the support of a dependent can claim him.

When husband and wife file separately in community property states, even though they contributed equally to the support of a dependent, either the husband or wife must take the entire credit.

If you became married during the year—even as early as Jan. 1, 1951—you are considered married for the year. So you can file a joint return, getting the benefit of his or her exemption.

IF A DEPENDENT died in 1951—even as early as Jan. 1, 1951—you can claim the full $600 exemption for him, provided he was truly a dependent during that part of the year in which he lived.

Besides his regular $600 exemption, a person filing a return gets an extra $600 exemption if he was blind on Dec. 31, 1951 and $600 extra for his wife if she was blind, in addition to the regular exemption for her, provided she was blind on the last day of 1951 and files jointly with him or, if she had no income, he alone files a return.

Where husband and wife file separately, the one who is blind claims his or her own regular $600 exemption, plus $600 for blindness.

Where husband or wife died blind any time in 1951, the surviving spouse, by filing a joint return, can claim that extra $600 exemption for the blind one who died. You can't claim an extra $600 exemption for a blind dependent.

A taxpayer who was 65 in 1951 can claim in addition to his regular $600 exemption an extra $600 because he was 65. He gets an extra $600 exemption for his wife if she was 65 in 1951—provided she files jointly with him or, having no income, she doesn't file at all.

If she had any income he gets no exemption for her unless she does file jointly with him. Where husband and wife are 65 but file separate returns, each claims his own exemption on his own return.

Who was 65 in 1951? The courts consider people 65 on the day be-

Utilities Board Again 'Shelves' Pay Ordinance

Proposed ordinance raising salaries of water and sewage department employees was again "shelved" by the city's public utilities board Tuesday night.

Decision to carry over the measure until another meeting of the board at 8 p. m. Friday was made by members last night.

The proposed ordinance which would hike salaries for employees of both the city water and sewage departments, must be agreed upon by the board, before it can be submitted to city council.

The board will give the measure further consideration at its next meeting, and a board spokesman Wednesday expressed the opinion that the proposed ordinance would be ready for the lawmakers by Feb. 5.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—For each exemption you can legally claim you knock $600 off your income before the rest is taxable.

There are various exemptions and rules covering them: Husbands, wives, dependents, blind people, people 65 or over, and people who were born or died in 1951.

Everyone with $600 or more income last year must file a return, and everyone who does so gets a $600 exemption for himself.

A wife is not considered a dependent. If she had no income, and you file a return but she doesn't, you claim an exemption for her.

If she had any income, no matter how small, you get no exemption for her unless she files jointly with you.

Where a husband and wife each had income but file separate returns, each claims his own exemption.

Can a wife claimed as a dependent by someone like her father—it must be a close relative—who supported her? Yes.

But then her husband can't claim any exemption for her because, when she's claimed as the dependent of another, she can neither file jointly with her husband nor claim any exemption for herself.

IF A WIFE does file jointly with her husband, she can't be claimed as a dependent by anyone else even though the latter supported her. In short, a wife can't be claimed as an exemption on two returns.

Couples divorced or legally separated any time in 1951—even as late as Dec. 31—must file separate returns for the year. Each then gets only his own exemption.

Even though a husband paid all the support of a divorced or legally separated wife he can't claim an exemption for her.

Husbands and wives living apart by Dec. 31, 1951, but not divorced or legally separated during that year, may file a joint return.

A man and wife are considered married for all of 1951 if they were married as late as Dec. 31, 1951.

Although no one has to file a return unless he had $600 or more income, a quirk in the old law said you couldn't claim as a dependent anyone who had $500 or more income. That's been changed.

Now you can claim as a dependent—no matter how young or old—anyone who had less than $600 income in 1951, who received more than half his support from you, and who is closely related by blood, marriage or adoption as follows:

YOUR CHILD or grandchild; a stepchild but not his children; a legally adopted child; a brother, sister, step-brother, step-sister; your parents, grandparents, or other ancestors; your step-father, step-mother; aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews; your father-in-law, mother-in-law, brother-in-law, sister-in-law, son-in-law, or daughter-in-law.

As an illustration of what close relation by blood means, you can't claim a cousin as a dependent.

Some government payments to veterans are tax-free. You can claim as a dependent a veteran who, although receiving tax-free government money, had less than $600 taxable income of his own and fitted the other requirements listed above for a dependent.

You can claim as a dependent for all of 1951 anyone born as late as Dec. 31, 1951 who truly fits the rules covering dependents, even though the child died a moment after birth. You can't claim as a dependent an unborn child or one born dead.

Can husband and wife, when filing separate returns, divide the exemptions for dependents between them? No. Only the person who has provided more than half the support of a dependent can claim him.

When husband and wife file separately in community property states, even though they contributed equally to the support of a dependent, either the husband or wife must take the entire credit.

If you became married during the year—even as early as Jan. 1, 1951—you are considered married for the year. So you can file a joint return, getting the benefit of his or her exemption.

IF A DEPENDENT died in 1951—even as early as Jan. 1, 1951—you can claim the full $600 exemption for him, provided he was truly a dependent during that part of the year in which he lived.

Besides his regular $600 exemption, a person filing a return gets an extra $600 exemption if he was blind on Dec. 31, 1951 and $600 extra for his wife if she was blind, in addition to the regular exemption for her, provided she was blind on the last day of 1951 and files jointly with him or, if she had no income, he alone files a return.

Where husband and wife file separately, the one who is blind claims his or her own regular $600 exemption, plus $600 for blindness.

Where husband or wife died blind any time in 1951, the surviving spouse, by filing a joint return, can claim that extra $600 exemption for the blind one who died. You can't claim an extra $600 exemption for a blind dependent.

A taxpayer who was 65 in 1951 can claim in addition to his regular $600 exemption an extra $600 because he was 65. He gets an extra $600 exemption for his wife if she was 65 in 1951—provided she files jointly with him or, having no income, she doesn't file at all.

If she had any income he gets no exemption for her unless she does file jointly with him. Where husband and wife are 65 but file separate returns, each claims his own exemption on his own return.

Who was 65 in 1951? The courts consider people 65 on the day be-

Utilities Board Again 'Shelves' Pay Ordinance

Proposed ordinance raising salaries of water and sewage department employees was again "shelved" by the city's public utilities board Tuesday night.

Decision to carry over the measure until another meeting of the board at 8 p. m. Friday was made by members last night.

The proposed ordinance which would hike salaries for employees of both the city water and sewage departments, must be agreed upon by the board, before it can be submitted to city council.

The board will give the measure further consideration at its next meeting, and a board spokesman Wednesday expressed the opinion that the proposed ordinance would be ready for the lawmakers by Feb. 5.

THE OLYMPIC IDEA

MAIN IDEA of the Olympic Games is to bring nations closer together. Therefore, regret is expressed at the headquarters of the International Ice Hockey Federation in Zurich, Switzerland, that Russia's application to participate in the Olympic ice hockey tournament this month arrived too late for consideration.

The Russian bid could not be considered for the further reasons that the Soviet failed to send a copy of its ice hockey rules or a declaration that the Russian team would abide by the rules of the federation. The United States hockey team has flown to Europe for a final tuneup tour before entering the Winter Olympics at Oslo, Norway, starting February 14. Nine teams are entered, which will play 36 games on artificial and natural ice.

The British, meanwhile, are making a special effort to train both men and women participants in track and field events, known in England as "athletics." British interest in these sports has never been intense.

The British Olympic Association faces a real problem in raising funds to finance its athletes. An appeal for 30,000 pounds has gone forward. Size of the team will depend on the funds available.

The 1952 Olympics will be held at Helsinki, Finland. The United States Olympic Association raises funds through dues, admissions from special sporting activities, benefits, contributions from colleges, athletic organizations and private individuals.

The modern Olympic Games are based on the concept of Baron Pierre de Coubertin, French educator and scholar, that if the youth of the world could be brought together in competition on an equal footing, this would promote mutual respect, better understanding between different nationalities and international good will.

There have been adverse "incidents" of various kinds at recent Olympic Games, but considering that 60 countries speaking 20 different languages are involved, and that the modern games started about 50 years ago from scratch as to rules and regulations, the progress of the Olympic idea has been remarkable. It has a definite value in this torn world.

SQUIRREL-LIKE HOARDING

THOSE WHO enjoy studying unusual aberrations of humanity have a juicy morsel in the case of Harry C. Smith, who died in New York last November, in a charity hospital, and was buried in the potter's field. No more dreary end could come to any man. For years he resided in a dilapidated shack, amid a shambles of old newspapers and junk. The place had no bed. The few neighbors who noticed him did not know how he existed and probably cared little because they were poor themselves.

His only remembered activities were regular visits to a financial institution, where he had a safety deposit box. When his visits ceased officials made inquiry and found a half million dollars in the box. He had no known relatives and the money goes to the state. The moral seems to be that money has no value unless it is put to some use.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

There are those who deprecate the divisions that arise from politicking. They bespeak unity. Yet, it is characteristic of our society that every child ought to aspire to the Presidency and some men do. The keener the public interest, the more violent and sincere the campaign, the more numerous the aspirants, the better it is for the country. Let excitement reign and the truth come out!

Now there are ample Republican and Democratic aspirants to have some real hot excitement over personalities and issues during the process of elimination prior to the final ballot at the convention. Even among the Democrats, there are several hopeful ones, and should President Truman, on April 29, announce his departure from glory, which I cannot believe will happen, there will be many more. It would really do this nation good to have a dozen candidates in each party, all of them telling what they think and know about each other.

The emergence of Senator Estes Kefauver, as a candidate, is difficult to understand. Except for his abortive investigation of gambling, so competently dramatized and televised, he has hardly any record of outstanding achievement in the Senate. Nevertheless, he has made himself a popular figure via television, and his languid manner somehow does give the appearance of substance. He looks like a paragon of virtue, more the New England reformer than the Tennessee politician—that is, on television.

Whether his candidacy is realistic depends entirely upon the purposes of President Truman, who, if on April 29, he decides to continue, the convention of his party will have no way of stopping him. Kefauver then might be a Vice-Presidential candidate, if Truman will have him.

In the South, there is a firm desire to live without Truman as president. Yet, Southerners who are more Republican in their outlook than some Republican Senators, nevertheless could not join in such a coalition as Senator Karl Mundt proposed, nor will they actually vote against the Democratic Party when the time comes for a showdown in the voting booth. Habit with them is more potent than self-interest, which is not an unusual human trait, as anyone who studies the peregrinations of the human soul knows.

It has been suggested in the South, and I understand that such a plan has actually been proposed by Governor Allan Shivers of Texas, that a Democrat run for the Presidency whose object would be to defeat Truman and yet not be elected himself. In a word, such a candidate would be a totem pole, to draw off the curse from voting Republican. Thus, Truman would lose the Southern states, which would mean his defeat; yet the Southerners would not cast their ballots for the party of Lincoln.

Such a plan might make the election a stalemate, throw it into Congress in accordance with the Constitution and delay decision for months. But it would defeat Truman.

The South always presents this psychological problem. In the 1940, 1944 and 1948 campaigns, hopes were elevated among Republicans that sooner or later a way would be found to form a Republican-Southern Democratic coalition but nothing serious ever came of it.

A group that called themselves Jeffersonian Democrats came into existence for this purpose, but they achieved nothing. The Dixiecrats of 1948 did not aid in the election of a Republican, although no Democrat was ever more offensive to Southerners than Harry Truman.

To those who are not Southerners, the continuance of post-Civil War psychology is difficult to understand in view of the changing economic conditions in the South. Yet, it is a continuing fact in American affairs and must be taken seriously, particularly as some states in the South and Southwest are increasing in population.

The PARSON

by ALICE ROSS COLVER

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

IT WAS nearly midnight, and Donald was alone in the living room. Upstairs he could hear Virginia and Philip moving about, getting ready for bed. But he wanted a few moments by himself to recall and examine that startling moment he had had alone with Anne.

He had walked over with her and her mother and father when they left at eleven—Barth kept early hours always and was an early riser. For a moment they had all stood there on the veranda in the cold clear darkness looking up at the stars. And then Barth had spoken.

"I love night," he had said. "At night the earth seems to give up all the things so familiar to us—the sun, the clouds, the shadows, color. Things that belong to us mortals and that make our world. But at night we are presented with another realm entirely. We behold then a spaciousness that we know is not ours. And as the vastness of the heavens opens up, there is opened at the same time a new door to our spirits through which religion, God, love—call it what you will—may enter in. If people would only look at night more!"

Perhaps it had been those words of his that had stirred Anne, for when Barth and Constance turned to go into the house, she had lingered there beside him.

"I'll come in a moment," she had said, over her shoulder.

"The night makes me feel lonesome. Small and lonesome," Anne had told Donald.

And then, without knowing at all how it happened, she was in his arms and he was kissing her. But not violently, not in anger. In tenderness and reverence and in a mingling of hope and despair. He could hear his voice now, hesitant and anxious. "I love you, Anne. I've always loved you."

And she had sighed and answered, "I know." And then she had drawn away, reluctantly, yet with determination. "But there are so many things to work out. And the next moment she had slipped from him and was gone.

Would they work out—ever? And if they did, did she mean she loved him, too? He asked himself these questions and could not answer.

"Wait and see," he told himself impatiently. "Wait. Wait. Wait!"

The telephone ringing in the little closet off the living room startled him from his thoughts. Rising, he went to answer it. Who could it be at this hour? It was almost midnight.

"Hello?"

A frightened, trembling voice

spoke in his ear. "Mr. Kent? Is that you?"

"Yes. Who is this?"

"It's Edna, Mr. Kent. Edna Bowers. Oh, Mr. Kent! I didn't know who else to call. Something awful's happened. And I'm so scared. Oh, Mr. Kent, will you please come get me?"

Panic in her voice. Sheer panic. "Where are you, Edna? What's happened?"

"I'm—oh! I don't know where I am! Wait a minute." He heard a door open and her voice asking someone, "What's the name of this place?" Then she spoke to him again with that dreadful fear in her still. "I'm at Nick's Saloon. It's on —" She gave him a route number. "It's maybe a mile—I dunno exactly, but it's not far from a little place called Palmerton."

"Palmerton?"

"Yes. Can you come, Mr. Kent? Right away?"

"Yes. I'll come, Edna. Right away. But tell me. Are you all right?"

"Yes—no—yes, I mean! The way you mean I am. Oh, I'll explain all about it when you get here. But please hurry. Will you? I know this is an awful thing to ask, but—" She was crying now.

He said, "Steady, Edna. Do you want me to call your folks?"

"No! Oh, no. Well, maybe. Oh, I don't know! What time is it? ... That late? Oh, maybe you'd better then. Just—just tell 'em I'm all right. Tell 'em—the car I was in broke down and you're coming for me and I'll be back soon."

"I'll fix it. Don't worry. But I do think they should know. And I'll find you. Nick's Saloon beyond Palmerton. Right? O.K. Hold steady now."

Two hours later, around two o'clock in the morning, the night bell woke Dr. Thomas Alcock from his sleep. At first he reached automatically for the telephone; then, as the bell sounded again, he knew what it was.

"Accident," he thought, immediately awake. And slipping out of bed, he pulled on trousers and a coat over his pajamas in the dark so as not to wake Edith, his wife, and padded in his slippers quickly down to the front door, switching on lights as he went.

A tall young man stood there, someone vaguely familiar to him, supporting a girl whose hair was disheveled and filled with small sticks, whose right arm hung limp, and whose cut and swollen face was, at first, unrecognizable.

"Dr. Alcock? We're in a little trouble here," the young man said. "Yes. So I see. Come in. Come in. Right this way." In the office he exclaimed, "Why, it's Edna Bowers!"

"Hello, Doc," she said weakly.

What had she been up to? And who was this nice-looking fellow with her? Oh, yes! New teacher in town. Was sure he'd seen him around. Went to Atwood's church.

"Sort of banged up, eh?" he said, his tone kind and fatherly. "Shoulder? Or is it your arm? Let's take a look. Better get that coat off you first, I guess. Easy!"

To Donald he said, "She's fainted. Well, maybe it's best that way. Help me get her on the table, will you?"

Donald liked him. He was middle-aged, heavy-set, gray-haired, with keen gray eyes in a strong, deeply carved, tired face. A good face. A face that you could trust.

"What happened?" he asked, and, without waiting for an answer as his fingers probed, he went on. "Dislocation. Shoulder. I think that's all. But most painful. Fix that in a jiffy while she's still out."

He was silent, working. "There! Now I'll strap her up. No bones broken except—" He bent for further examination as he opened her dress. "Couple of ribs cracked, maybe—" He looked down at her face. "Hey! Decided to wake up? Feel better? You should."

"Should I?"

He smiled down at her. "Sorry. Had to cut your clothes a little." "All right." Her eyes went to Donald standing now with his back to them at the window. "Doc, my face—"

"Coming to that." He finished winding the broad gauze about her body and drew on her slip and dress. "Now. Let's see. Hm. Here's a cut needs a stitch or two. Way up under your hair. Lucky! You'll still be pretty." He tossed the bloody handkerchief she had bound over it with her scarf into a basket and held up the scarf.

"Want to save this? No? O.K." The scarf followed the handkerchief. Then he brought a basin of water and some sterilized pads and cleaned off her whole face, his touch gentle, deft, sure. At the washbowl in the corner a moment later, cleaning up his own hands, he came back to his question.

"What happened?"

"The car went off the road." "Hm." He turned, drying his hands, and his glance pierced Donald who had come back to Edna. "And how did you escape, young man?"

"I wasn't with her." "Oh?"

"I telephoned to him and he came for me and brought me home," Edna explained. She looked up at the doctor who was bending over her once more. "Nobody's mixed up in this but me," she said firmly.

"I see. This'll hurt for a minute but—"

Handicaps Of Epilepsy Can Be Reduced By Modern Drugs

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MANY people do not realize that epilepsy can now be controlled with drugs.

It is believed that if all the epileptic children could receive the necessary treatment at the hands of experienced physicians, very few would be handicapped by epileptic convulsions.

Epileptics usually have a hard time finding a useful place in society because of the feelings of others toward them. This is true even of epileptic children.

Needs Inspiration

Too often these children are shielded and made to feel ashamed of themselves. The epileptic child must be given inspiration and be taught that he can advance through life in spite of his condition.

There are still too unfortunate misconceptions about epileptics—that they have a hereditary disease and are feeble-minded. Both of these ideas are false.

Epileptic convulsions may appear in a person at any age. There are about 750,000 epileptics in the United States, over half of them being under 20 years of age.

The causes of this disorder are many. Less than a fourth of the cases are due to scar tissue of the brain, resulting from a head injury. Most cases are due to an abnormality of the brain cells themselves, the cause of which is unknown.

Normal Powers of Thought

Many times, thinking ability is reduced in an epileptic person, but this is not the common rule. Most of these people have normal powers of thought, and may reach the superior level. Many with epilepsy are emotionally stable and well adjusted.

There are many different kinds and degrees of epileptic attacks. A typical, severe attack includes muscle tremors, rigidity, unconsciousness, and loss of control over the bladder and bowels.

At the other extreme, a seizure may appear as just a passing period of forgetfulness. Many episodes of temper tantrums, fainting, mental confusion, or blackouts may be slight cases of epilepsy that have missed diagnosis. These types, as well as brief periods of staring without obvious cause, are usually called petit mal epilepsy.

Unconscious Action

In one strange type of epilepsy in adults, the person may carry out an action without being aware of what he is doing.

The modern treatment of epilepsy is with drugs such as phenobarbital, dilantin, mesantoin and tridione. Such treatment can reduce the number of seizures in almost all cases, and often it prevents them entirely. However, not every drug works in every case. Only an experienced physician can determine the correct drug, after careful tests.

An instrument called the electroencephalograph is extremely helpful in diagnosing the type of epilepsy, so that proper treatment can be started for that particular form.

Bennett Cerf's Try, Stop Me

Movie producer Sam Goldwyn was a visitor to Television's What's My Line? one Sunday evening. That's a show in which I've participated recently, along with Arlene Francis, Dorothy Kilgallen, John Daly, and Hal Block. Mr. G. was the "mystery guest" of the week, and according to custom the panel put on blindfolds before he entered.

Unfortunately, his identity was no particular mystery to me, since the day before the show he had impulsively phoned to demand, "Hey, what kind of questions are you going to ask me tomorrow night?" I confined myself to asking "Are you a comedian?" (Mr. G. answered "no") and let some-

Public Eager, Thirsty For Real TV Entertainment

NEW YORK—(AP)—The average television set owner knows what is wrong with video:

They don't have enough good shows.

Oddly enough, this knowledge is widely shared by television executives, too.

"The level of entertainment must be raised," said Hubbell Robinson, boss of Columbia's TV network productions.

But how? Like many another top brass figure in the industry today Robinson will fall on your neck if you suggest a fresh new program idea—or he'll shower you with money, if it's crass wealth you prefer.

"New ideas pour in here almost by the truckload," he said dolefully, "but there isn't a good one in a carload. And it's the old story—the best ideas come from the professionals, not the amateurs."

The trouble, as Robinson sees it, is this:

"In television the technical facilities have outstripped the creative skills. The caliber of creative people must be improved and improved. We must develop better writers, better directors, better producers."

"If we don't, television won't continue to hold the people as it does now."

"The actors and performers are OK, but we have to get more of them, and create new ones."

We depend too much on stars who made their fame in other mediums, such as the radio, the theater and the movies."

The drain on television talent is already enormous.

"Our network puts on 70 program hours a week," said Robinson. "That's roughly equal to 70 motion pictures—more than the annual output of a major film studio. We turn out in a week what they do in a year."

This tremendous pressure takes its toll in nervous breakdowns among producers who get to living on diets of aspirin and coffee, pep capsules and sleeping pills.

"The answer partially lies in a longer period of preparation and planning of shows," said Robinson. "But so far the industry has mushroomed so fast we haven't had time to catch our breath."

"Every time you make a decision now, it's a pioneering move—and you don't know whether you're right or wrong."

Robinson believes television is wide open, however, to anyone, that is, with fresh ideas, a trigger-given mind, and the physical endurance of a buffalo. He says:

"I think television will be the biggest factor in American living if the creative minds in it live up to the challenge. The public is eager and thirsty for real entertainment. The big thing is to come up with it."

THE OLYMPIC IDEA

MAIN IDEA of the Olympic Games is to bring nations closer together. Therefore, regret is expressed at the headquarters of the International Ice Hockey Federation in Zurich, Switzerland, that Russia's application to participate in the Olympic ice hockey tournament this month arrived too late for consideration.

The Russian bid could not be considered for the further reasons that the Soviet failed to send a copy of its ice hockey rules or a declaration that the Russian team would abide by the rules of the federation. The United States hockey team has flown to Europe for a final tuneup tour before entering the Winter Olympics at Oslo, Norway, starting February 14. Nine teams are entered, which will play 36 games on artificial and natural ice.

The British, meanwhile, are making a special effort to train both men and women participants in track and field events, known in England as "athletics." British interest in these sports has never been intense.

The British Olympic Association faces a real problem in raising funds to finance its athletes. An appeal for 30,000 pounds has gone forward. Size of the team will depend on the funds available.

The 1952 Olympics will be held at Helsinki, Finland. The United States Olympic Association raises funds through dues, admissions from special sporting activities, benefits, contributions from colleges, athletic organizations and private individuals.

The modern Olympic Games are based on the concept of Baron Pierre de Coubertin, French educator and scholar, that if the youth of the world could be brought together in competition on an equal footing, this would promote mutual respect, better understanding between different nationalities and international good will.

There have been adverse "incidents" of various kinds at recent Olympic Games, but considering that 60 countries speaking 20 different languages are involved, and that the modern games started about 50 years ago from scratch as to rules and regulations, the progress of the Olympic idea has been remarkable. It has a definite value in this torn world.

SQUIRREL-LIKE HOARDING

THOSE WHO enjoy studying unusual aberrations of humanity have a juicy morsel in the case of Harry C. Smith, who died in New York last November, in a charity hospital, and was buried in the potter's field. No more dreary end could come to any man. For years he resided in a dilapidated shack, amid a shambles of old newspapers and junk. The place had no bed. The few neighbors who noticed him did not know how he existed and probably cared little because they were poor themselves.

His only remembered activities were regular visits to a financial institution, where he had a safety deposit box. When his visits ceased officials made inquiry and found a half million dollars in the box. He had no known relatives and the money goes to the state. The moral seems to be that money has no value unless it is put to some use.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

There are those who deprecate the divisions that arise from politicking. They bespeak unity. Yet, it is characteristic of our society that every child ought to aspire to the Presidency and some men do. The keener the public interest, the more violent and sincere the campaign, the more numerous the aspirants, the better it is for the country. Let excitement reign and the truth come out!

Now there are ample Republican and Democratic aspirants to have some real hot excitement over personalities and issues during the process of elimination prior to the final ballot at the convention. Even among the Democrats, there are several hopeful ones, and should President Truman, on April 29, announce his departure from glory, which I cannot believe will happen, there will be many more. It would really do this nation good to have a dozen candidates in each party, all of them telling what they think and know about each other.

The emergence of Senator Estes Kefauver, as a candidate, is difficult to understand. Except for his abortive investigation of gambling, so competently dramatized and televised, he has hardly any record of outstanding achievement in the Senate. Nevertheless, he has made himself a popular figure via television, and his languid manner somehow does give the appearance of substance. He looks like a paragon of virtue, more the New England reformer than the Tennessee politician—that is, on television.

Whether his candidacy is realistic depends entirely upon the purposes of President Truman, who, if on April 29, he decides to continue, the convention of his party will have no way of stopping him. Kefauver then might be a Vice-Presidential candidate, if Truman will have him.

In the South, there is a firm desire to live without Truman as president. Yet, Southerners who are more Republican in their outlook than some Republican Senators, nevertheless could not join in such a coalition as Senator Karl Mundt proposed, nor will they actually vote against the Democratic Party when the time comes for a showdown in the voting booth. Habit with them is more potent than self-interest, which is not an unusual human trait, as anyone who studies the peregrinations of the human soul knows.

It has been suggested in the South, and I understand that such a plan has actually been proposed by Governor Allan Shivers of Texas, that a Democrat run for the Presidency whose object would be to defeat Truman and yet not be elected himself. In a word, such a candidate would be a totem pole, to draw off the curse from voting Republican. Thus, Truman would lose the Southern states, which would mean his defeat; yet the Southerners would not cast their ballots for the party of Lincoln.

Such a plan might make the election a stalemate, throw it into Congress in accordance with the Constitution and delay decision for months. But it would defeat Truman.

The South always presents this psychological problem. In the 1940, 1944 and 1948 campaigns, hopes were elevated among Republicans that sooner or later a way would be found to form a Republican-Southern Democratic coalition but nothing serious ever came of it.

A group that called themselves Jeffersonian Democrats came into existence for this purpose, but they achieved nothing. The Dixiecrats of 1948 did not aid in the election of a Republican, although no Democrat was ever more offensive to Southerners than Harry Truman.

To those who are not Southerners, the continuance of post-Civil War psychology is difficult to understand in view of the changing economic conditions in the South. Yet, it is a continuing fact in American affairs and must be taken seriously, particularly as some states in the South and Southwest are increasing in population.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

IT WAS nearly midnight, and Donald was alone in the living room. Upstairs he could hear Virginia and Philip moving about, getting ready for bed. But he wanted a few moments by himself to recall and examine that startling moment he had had alone with Anne.

He had walked over with her and her mother and father when they left at eleven—Barth kept early hours always and was as early to rise. For a moment they had all stood there on the veranda in the cold clear darkness looking up at the stars. And then Barth had spoken.

"I love night," he had said. "At night the earth seems to give up all the things so familiar to us—the sunshine, the clouds, the shadows, color. Things that belong to us mortals and that make our world. But at night we are presented with another realm entirely. We behold then a spaciousness that we know is not ours. And as the vastness of the heavens opens up, there is opened at the same time a new door to our spirits through which religion, God, love—call it what you will—may enter in. If people would only look at night more!"

Perhaps it had been those words of his that had stirred Anne, for when Barth and Constance turned to go into the house, she had lingered there beside him.

"I'll come in a moment," she had said, over her shoulder.

"The night makes me feel lonesome. Small and lonesome," Anne had told Donald.

And then, without knowing at all how it happened, she was in his arms and he was kissing her. But not violently, not in anger. In tenderness and reverence and in a mingling of hope and despair. He could hear his voice now, hesitant and anguished. "I love you, Anne. I've always loved you."

And she had sighed and answered, "I know." And then she had drawn away, reluctantly, yet with determination. "But there are so many things to work out." And the next moment she had slipped from him and was gone.

Would they work out—ever? And if they did, did she mean she loved him, too? He asked himself these questions and could not answer.

"Wait and see," he told himself impatiently. "Wait. Wait. Wait!"

The telephone ringing in the little closet off the living room startled him from his thoughts. Rising, he went to answer it. Who could it be at this hour? It was almost midnight.

"Hello?"

A frightened, trembling voice

spoke in his ear. "Mr. Kent? Is that you?"

"Yes, Edna, is this?"

"It's Edna, Mr. Kent. Edna Borowski. Oh, Mr. Kent! I didn't know who else to call. Something awful's happened. And I'm so scared. Oh, Mr. Kent, will you please come get me?"

Panic in her voice. Sheer panic. "Where are you, Edna? What's happened?"

"I'm—oh! I don't know where I am! Wait a minute." He heard a door open and her voice asking someone, "What's the name of this place?" Then she spoke to him again with that dreadful fear in her still. "I'm at Nick's Saloon. It's on —" She gave him a route number. "It's maybe a mile—I dunno exactly, but it's not far from a little place called Palmerton."

"Palmerton?"

"Yes. Can you come, Mr. Kent? Right away?"

"Yes, I'll come, Edna. Right away. But tell me. Are you all right?"

"Yes—no—yes, I mean! The way you mean I am. Oh, I'll explain all about it when you get here. But please hurry. Will you? I know this is an awful thing to ask, but—" She was crying now.

He said, "Steady, Edna. Do you want me to call your folks?"

"No! Oh, no. Well, maybe. Oh, I don't know! What time is it?"

"That late? Oh, maybe you'd better then. Just—just tell 'em I'm all right. Tell 'em the car I was in broke down and you're comin' for me and I'll be back soon."

"I'll fix it. Don't worry. But I do think they should know. And I'll find you. Nick's Saloon beyond Palmerton. Right? O.K. Hold steady now."

Two hours later, around two o'clock in the morning, the night bell woke Dr. Thomas Alcock from his sleep. At first he reached automatically for the telephone; then, as the bell sounded again, he knew what it was.

"Accident," he thought, immediately awake. And, slipping out of bed, he pulled on trousers and a coat over his pajamas in the dark so as not to wake Edith, his wife, and padded in his slippers quickly down to the front door, switching on lights as he went.

A tall young man stood there, someone vaguely familiar to him, supporting a girl whose hair was disheveled and filled with small sticks, whose right arm hung limp, and whose cut and swollen face was, at first, unrecognizable.

"Dr. Alcock? We're in a little trouble here," the young man said.

"Yes. So I see. Come in. Come in. Right this way." In the office he exclaimed, "Why, it's Edna Borowski!"

Handicaps Of Epilepsy Can Be Reduced By Modern Drugs

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MANY people do not realize that epilepsy can now be controlled with drugs.

It is believed that if all the epileptic children could receive the necessary treatment at the hands of experienced physicians, very few would be handicapped by epileptic convulsions.

Epileptics usually have a hard time finding a useful place in society because of the feelings of others toward them. This is true even of epileptic children.

Needs Inspiration

Too often these children are shielded and made to feel ashamed of themselves. The epileptic child must be given inspiration and be taught that he can advance through life in spite of his condition.

There are still two unfortunate misconceptions about epileptics—that they have a hereditary disease and are feeble-minded. Both of these ideas are false.

Epileptic convulsions may appear in a person at any age. There are about 750,000 epileptics in the United States, over half of them being under 20 years of age.

The causes of this disorder are many. Less than a fourth of the cases are due to scar tissue of the brain, resulting from a head injury. Most cases are due to an abnormality of the brain cells themselves, the cause of which is unknown.

Normal Powers of Thought

Many times, thinking ability is reduced in an epileptic person, but this is not the common rule. Most of these people have normal powers of thought, and may reach the superior level. Many with epilepsy are emotionally stable and well adjusted.

There are many different kinds and degrees of epileptic attacks. A typical, severe attack includes muscle tremors, rigidity, unconsciousness, and loss of control over the bladder and bowels.

At the other extreme, a seizure may appear as just a passing period of forgetfulness. Many episodes of temper tantrums, fainting, mental confusion, or blackouts may be slight cases of epilepsy that have missed diagnosis. These types, as well as brief periods of staring without obvious cause, are usually called petit mal epilepsy.

Unconscious Action

In one strange type of epilepsy in adults, the person may carry out an action without being aware of what he is doing.

The modern treatment of epilepsy is with drugs such as phenobarbital, dilantin, mesantoin and tridione. Such treatment can reduce the number of seizures in almost all cases, and often it prevents them entirely. However, not every drug works in every case. Only an experienced physician can determine the correct drug, after careful tests.

An instrument called the electro-encephalograph is extremely helpful in diagnosing the type of epilepsy, so that proper treatment can be started for that particular form.

General Berger Hospital Guild Meeting Hears Expansion Program Plans

Nominating Committee Named

Robert Brehmer, member of Board of Governors of Berger Hospital, was the speaker at the General Berger Hospital Guild meeting, held Tuesday evening in First Methodist church.

Representatives of the general organization and of local Guilds were on hand to hear Mr. Brehmer review new plans for the addition to Berger Hospital and to ask the support of the Guild in the expansion program, which will include a maternity wing.

Future plans also call for the compiling of a history of the hospital, listing the many individuals having made donations to the institution and keeping a record of those to come.

Mrs. Ralph Hosler of Ashville presided at the business meeting when reports were heard from the various Guilds.

A nominating committee was named to select a slate of officers for the April election. Members of the committee are Mrs. Walter Heine, chairman; Mrs. Robert Moyer and Mrs. Pryor Harmount.

'Working Wives Problem Dead,' Says Author

A question that vitally concerned women a generation ago—"Shall I marry or have a career?"—is now as dead as wet ashes, says Nancy Barr Mavity in the lead article of a February magazine.

Today, according to Miss Mavity's piece, working wives outnumber unmarried females with jobs by a ratio of 7 to 5. No longer do working girls refer to themselves as career women, or argue their right to develop their individual capacities. They just plain work.

The don't always love it, but they do it anyway, for under present circumstances the average husband's pay envelope cannot meet the needs of a white-collar family.

One former stumbling block to a wife's getting a job was her husband's attitude, Miss Mavity points out. Every man jealously guarded his prerogative of being a "good provider." If he didn't, he would lose face—under the cultural code of a generation ago.

But this prejudice, along with others, has been overcome by economic necessity. At the war's end, the returned veteran had three alternatives: (1) grab the first job offered; (2) look for a job that promised well for the future; (3) educate himself for a chosen vocation, under the GI Bill of Rights. The second and third choices depended on his wife keeping the rent paid and the larder stocked.

Many young wives did just that, to give their husbands a better chance for the future. In their turn, husbands help with domestic chores, "without resentment or condescension." Paradoxically, the army taught many men to do "woman's work"—to sew on a button, darn a sock and make a bed.

This rift in the traditional pattern has had no disruptive effect on marriage, according to many couples interviewed by the author. The raising of children is a problem, but it is being solved by baby sitters, day nurseries, school playground facilities and summer camps.

Tuesday afternoon in Jackson Township school. Mrs. Marvinne Rhodes and Mrs. Henry Butt, members of Pickaway County Home Demonstration Council, will have charge of this session.

Spectacular Results Seen With Cleaner

A new rug and carpet cleaner that has survived rigid testing will soon be available at hardware stores and elsewhere.

Used by theaters, hotels and airlines for three years, the cleaner has had rave reports from testing laboratories.

The new cleaner dry cleans and washes at the same time. In appearance, it is a wet, crumbly substance. In contact with a rug's fibers, its liquid contents loosen dirt and grime, dissolve other stains and blot them up. In a demonstration proving its spectacular results, shoe blacking was rubbed in a two-foot oval on a light rose-colored rug. The cleaner was sprinkled on, brushed in and allowed to dry. Twenty minutes later the spot was vacuumed. All of the smudged area disappeared.

York Research of Stamford,

Conn. gave the product severe trials. After more than a thousand tests with over 100 rug-cleaning preparations, the laboratory reported: "Best rug-cleaning compound for home use we have found."

In cleaning tests, tar, coffee, garage grease, coal soot, cooking fats, milk and grapejuice disappeared. The cleaner removed the stains of beet juice, mayonnaise, sugar syrup, candle wax, blood, mustard, ketchup and lipstick. It cleaned and deodorized dog and cat accidents without loss of color in the rug. Some stains, however—ink, rust, iodine, mercurchrome—could not be removed.

The cleaner was found non-injurious to all types of rugs and carpets, harmless to the skin and not flammable. It leaves no disagreeable after-odor, and as it dries fast it creates no mildew problem. One gallon, selling for $3.79, will clean four or five 9 x 12 rugs.

Cavalier Cagers Score 54-38 Win Over Tigers

Circleville's Tiger basketball team was handed a decisive 54-38 defeat Tuesday night by the Chillicothe Cavalier cagers on the Cavalier hardwood.

Going into the game minus the service of two of its regular starters, the Tiger crew soon lost three others because of fouls.

Missing from the starting lineup because of illness were Jim Cook, Tiger pivot, and Jerry Pritchard, guard. Cook and Pritchard have been confined to their homes since last weekend.

In addition, the Tigers soon lost the services of Dud Morris, Mike Brown and Big Bill Gillis in Tuesday's test via the foul rule.

Chillicothe opened the encounter with a meagre 14-11 advantage over the locals, while Circleville came to within one point of the 24-22 halftime count.

Chillicothe struted away from the Tigers in the third frame, however, as Tiger players began retiring to the bench. The Cavaliers posted a 39-28 third period lead and finished with the 16-point edge.

Don Olney plunked nine points through the netting during the game to earn high-scoring honors for the Tigers, while Chillicothe's Evans won game honors with 20 points.

Circleville's reserve team also lost in the preliminary encounter, dropping the match by a 35-28 count to the junior Cavaliers.

The locals, without the services of Mike Rooney, now ineligible, trailed throughout the contest by quarter scores of 12-5, 20-13 and 31-19 before closing on the short end of the 35-28 finale.

Ronnie Bennington bucketed 12 points for the junior Tigers in the tilt, tying with Chillicothe's Maser for game honors.

Circleville's next contest will be Friday night, a South Central Ohio League encounter against invading Washington C. H. in Pickaway Fairgrounds Coliseum. Friday's

The current popularity of General Eisenhower in the South may arise from the assumption that it would be possible to vote for him for other reasons than that he has declared himself to be a Republican. To Southerners, therefore, he is a way out of their dilemma, which is how to vote against Truman without voting for a Republican. But that argument does not do much good in other parts of the country.

The realistic fact is that names do count for more than principles and symbols affect men's minds potently. And yet the names, Democratic and Republican, per se, have no such meaning as they had during the Presidency of Andrew Johnson.

DEMONSTRATION AGENT REPORTS:

Local Housewife Can Save Energy With Laundry Dryer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is another in a series compiled for The Cincinnati Herald by Miss Genevieve Alley, Pickaway County Home Demonstration Agent. Subsequent articles will follow.)

A dryer in the laundry can save Cincinnati and Pickaway County housewives the energy required in lifting, carrying and hanging clothes.

The dryer does away with "waiting for a nice day to do the laundry," says Miss Genevieve Alley, Pickaway County Home Demonstration Agent, but unless properly used the dryer can be disappointing.

Bath towels, chenille bedspreads, corduroy, jerseys, twills and similar fabrics fluff up nicely when dried in a dryer. Drying time varies with the load, but from 40 to 60 minutes is the average.

Tests to date have shown no difference in line drying and dryer drying so far as effect on strength of material is concerned. Results have shown that the electric dryer affected color less than line drying. Clothes stay as white as they do with other drying methods.

IT MUST BE remembered that there will be moisture and lint in the room unless the dryer is vented outside. However, there will be no more loss of lint in the dryer than by line drying. A dryer should be located where there is good ventilation.

For best results do not let the clothes get "bone dry". This produces hard, set wrinkles. Keep like fabrics together—there's a difference in drying time. Do not dry starched and unstarched clothes in the same load.

Check the instructions for the size load the dryer will handle. An overload takes longer to dry and may damage the motor. If you have a wringer type washer, check to see that the wringer is operating as it should.

WHEN SELECTING your dryer, check the lint trap to see how easy or difficult it is to clean. Results of recent experiments show that the electric models requiring three wires—230 volts, are more satisfactory than those operated on 115 volts. Some models of gas dryers have produced varying amounts of fume fading.

Installation cost should be checked as well as initial cost.

With careful selection and use, the dryer can be an efficient addition to laundry equipment for some families. However, it is not recommended under all circumstances.

Ohio Clerics Oppose Envoy To Vatican

COLUMBUS, Jan. 30 — (P)—Ohio Protestant preachers have voiced disapproval of sending a U. S. ambassador to the Vatican.

The clergymen, attending the 33rd annual Ohio Pastor's Convention in Columbus, said the fact that Gen. Mark Clark has withdrawn his name as a possibility for the ambassador appointment does not alter the matter.

In a resolution, the ministers stated "we are not concerned with the person but with a principle."

They listed three reasons for their stand:

(1) A diplomatic mission to the Vatican is in violation of separation of church and state.

(2) The action would create disunion when unity is needed most.

(3) A papal nuncio to Washington, D. C., would become dean of the diplomatic corps, outranking representatives of other nations. (Protocol gives the oldest state priority in rank. Diplomatic custom also gives preference to a clerical delegate).

Londoner Killed

LONDON, O., Jan. 30 — (P)—A car-truck collision at the intersection of Highways 38 and 40 Tuesday killed Mrs. Grace Edwards, 63, of London Route 3 and slightly injured her husband, Robert G. Edwards, 66.

The WONDER Of The AGES!

Burr Oak Dam Is Closed To Control Flood

COLUMBUS, Jan. 30 — (P)—Natural Resources Director A. W. Marion has acted to bring the level of water in Burr Oak Dam north of Athens to its permanent pool stage.

Marion asked U. S. Army engineers who control the water level to keep the gates in the dam closed. They were shut during the weekend flood and Marion credited the action with keeping high water out of the business district of Glouster.

He said it also spared other property on the east branch of Sunday Creek below the dam from flood damage.

Most of the water backed up by the dam will cover land in Morgan and Athens County. Marion's department has charge of recreational features about the dam. He expressed the hope that the permanent pool stage will be reached before the summer vacation season starts. That will depend on how the engineers view his request, he indicated.

Training For 37th To Start Monday

CAMP POLK, La., Jan. 30 — (P)—An eight-week training program will begin Monday for men of the 37th Infantry Division.

The division, a former Ohio National Guard unit, will be processed this week—aptitude tests, classification tests to determine assignments, equipment and clothing inspections, and other details.

Assigned to aid in instructing the ex-Guardsmen will be more than 2,000 rotated combat personnel—including many Korean veterans assigned to the 37th.

$15,000 Awarded

CINCINNATI, Jan. 30 — (P)—A U. S. district court jury has awarded $15,000 damages to Mrs. Mollie Terry of Ironton in her suit against the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. Mrs. Terry's husband, Ray Terry, was killed May 12, 1948, when a locomotive boiler on which he worked as engineer exploded in Chillicothe.

DEMONSTRATION AGENT REPORTS:

Local Housewife Can Save Energy With Laundry Dryer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is another in a series compiled for The Circleville Herald by Miss Genevieve Alley, Pickaway County Home Demonstration Agent. Subsequent articles will follow.)

A dryer in the laundry can save Circleville and Pickaway County housewives the energy required in lifting, carrying and hanging clothes.

The dryer does away with "waiting for a nice day to do the laundry," says Miss Genevieve Alley, Pickaway County Home Demonstration Agent, but unless properly used the dryer can be disappointing.

Bath towels, chenille bedspreads, corduroy, jerseys, twills and similar fabrics fluff up nicely when dried in a dryer. Drying time varies with the load, but from 40 to 60 minutes is the average.

Tests to date have shown no difference in line drying and dryer drying so far as effect on strength of material is concerned. Results have shown that the electric dryer affected color less than line drying. Clothes stay as white as they do with other drying methods.

IT MUST BE remembered that there will be moisture and lint in the room unless the dryer is vented outside. However, there will be no more loss of lint in the dryer than by line drying. A dryer should be located where there is good ventilation.

For best results do not let the clothes get "bone dry". This produces hard, set wrinkles. Keep like fabrics together—there's a difference in drying time. Do not dry starched and unstarched clothes in the same load. Check the instructions for the size load the dryer will handle. An overload takes longer to dry and may damage the motor. If you have a wringer type washer, check to see that the wringer is operating as it should.
